BIO

Deputy Chief Angela Johnson is a native of North Charleston whose work shows her dedication to her community. Her journey began after graduating high school, as she pursued her Bachelor's degree at Claflin College, now known as Claflin University. Upon graduating, she briefly taught middle school before her aspirations led her to join the North Charleston Police Department in 1996.

Over the past 28 years, Deputy Chief Johnson has not only made significant contributions to the department but has also impacted the community she serves. Her pursuit of knowledge and professional growth has been evident throughout her career. Balancing a career in law enforcement with her commitment to education, she earned a Master's in Business Administration in 2011, a Master's in Criminal Justice in 2020, and eventually a Doctorate in Business. These academic achievements highlight her dedication to excellence and her desire to enhance her professional capabilities.

Deputy Chief Johnson's career is a testament to her hard work and determination. In addition to her role at the police department, she served as an adjunct instructor at Miller-Motte Technical College for 13 years. She is also a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Incorporated. She climbed the ranks within the North Charleston Police Department, demonstrating her leadership and expertise. From March to July 2022, she attended the Southern Police Institute's Command Officer Development Course, where her performance earned her the Director's Award for the highest average in the course.

In 2022, Deputy Chief Johnson made history by becoming the first African-American female promoted to Deputy Chief at the North Charleston Police Department. Her experience includes assignments in Patrol, the School Resource Officers' Unit, the Narcotics Unit, the Office of Professional Standards, and Investigations. She has served as the Deputy Chief of the Administrative Services Division and currently holds the position of Deputy Chief of the Investigations Division. Additionally, she continues to share her knowledge as an Adjunct Instructor of Business at Voorhees University.

Deputy Chief Angela Johnson's career and achievements reflect her commitment to public service and the betterment of her community.
